Acknowledgements

This Studbook is a part of the assignment to the Wildlife Institute of India, Dehradun assigned by the Central Zoo Authority, New Delhi, for the compilation and publication of studbooks of selected endangered species of wild animals in Indian zoos.

The authors wish to thank the Central Zoo Authority for financial support and the opportunity to compile the National Studbook for Royal Bengal Tiger.

We are thankful to Shri. P. R. Sinha, Director WII for his guidance and support. We would also like to express our appreciation for the advice and support extended by Dr. V.B. Mathur, Dean Faculty of Wildlife Sciences, WII. The authors also wish to thank Shri. B.S. Bonal, Member Secretary, CZA and all the staff members of the Central Zoo Authority, specially Dr. Brij Kishor Gupta, Evaluation and Monitoring Officer, Dr. Naim Akhtar, Scientific Officer and Shri Vivek Goyal, Data Processing Assistant, for their advice and support.

The help rendered in compilation of the studbook data by zoos holding Royal Bengal Tiger in India is gratefully acknowledged.

We also wish to thank Ms. Laurie Bingmann Lackey of ISIS for providing the SPARKS software. Her kind advice and timely help were of great help in compilation of this studbook. The authors express their gratitude and appreciation to Shri. Mukesh Arora and Shri Virendra Sharma, Computer personnel, Wildlife Institute of India for designing and formatting the studbook.

Royal Bengal Tiger: Biology and Status

Taxonomy

Kingdom:	Animalia
Phylum:	Chordata
Class:	Mammalia
Order:	Carnivore
Family:	Felidae
Scientific Name:	Panthera tigris tigris
Species Authority:	Linnaeus, 1758
Common Name/s:	Bengal tiger (English), Bagh, Sher (Hindi), Bagh (Nepali), Wagh (Marathi), Poolee (Tamil & Telugu), Kuduwa (Malayalam), Hoolee (Kannad)

National animal of India, the Royal Bengal Tiger is a top predator and a flagship species. A total of 39 tiger reserves (32137.14 sq km of core tiger habitat) are home to the species. The dwindling population of tigers in India despite showing an upward trend as reflected by 2010 tiger population estimates, continues to remain threatened by large scale poaching and habitat fragmentation.

The Bengal tiger is placed under the order Carnivora due to the presence of one molar tooth on each side of the jaw, called carnassials or flesh tooth for cutting meat. Based on classical taxonomy 8 subspecies based on body size, skull characters, pelage coloration, and striping patterns, are recognized:

Bengal tiger	(Panthera tigris tigris)
Siberian tiger	(P.t. altaica)
Chinese tiger	(P.t. amoyensis)
Indo-Chinese tiger	(P.t. corbetti)
Caspian tiger	(P.t. virgata)
Sumatran tiger	(P.t. sumatrae)
Javan tiger	(P.t. sondaica)
Balinese tiger	(P.t. balica)

Recent taxonomic revision based on significant differences in genetic structure among tigers from different geographic regions with respect to the allelic variation in the major histocompatibility complex (MHC), mitochondrial DNA, and microsatellite data, allopatric geographical distribution of sub-species and their differential natural history; suggest that there are 5 extant sub-species of tigers (the Caspian, Bali and Javan tiger are extinct and the population of Sumatran tiger has shrunk to a very small number):

Siberian/Amur tigers	(P. t. altaica)
Indochinese tigers	(P. t. corbetti);
Sumatran tigers	(P. t. sumatrae);
Bengal tigers	(P. t. tigris);
South China tiger	(P. t. amoyensis).

The Indochinese tiger has been found by some researchers to exist as two separate sub species viz. Northern Indochinese tigers (P. t. corbetti I) and Southern Indochinese tigers (P. t. corbetti II). A new theory put forward by Kitchener and Dugmore (2000) states that there are only three sub-species of tiger on basis of biogeographic analysis Panthera tigris tigris, P.t. sondaica and P.t. virgata. All the other known sub-species are not diagnosably distinct sub-species but a small part of the population of above three mentioned sub-species that have undergone clinal changes as a response to environmental and ecological gradients throughout their mainland distribution.

Biology

General Characteristics/Morphology

The tiger pelage is light tawny to orange, with under parts of legs, abdomen, cheek and throat white. The black coloured stripes of tigers are unique among all felids and make a distinctive pattern which varies from one individual to other and thus are used as a census tool.

Table 1: Biological attributes of Bengal Tiger

Attributes	Males	Females
Body length	270-310 cm	240-265 cm
Body weight	175-260 kg	100-160 kg
Age at first reproduction (free ranging)	4.8 years (mean)	3.8 years (mean)
Age at first reproduction (in captivity)	2.5 years	2.5 years
Longevity	12-15 years in wild; 20 years or more in captivity
Gestation period	106 -112 days
Litter size	Ranging from 1 – 7 cubs (mostly 2-4)

Habitat Ecology

In India, tiger occur in thorny, tropical dry and moist deciduous forest, evergreen and semi-evergreen forest, and mixed sub-tropical forests on foothills of Himalayas. They are also found in riparian terai grasslands and swampy mangrove forests. The main factors that have implications on habitat selection are presence of large-bodied prey, dense cover and water. Tiger mainly prey upon ungulates, in the absence of large bodied cervids and bovids in areas like tropical dry deciduous forest they have adapted to small prey and only occasionally take to cattle lifting. Though domestic cattle are considered an important prey for tiger but occasional man-eating is considered an aberrance from the normal feeding habits.

The tiger is an opportunistic predator hunting on a diverse prey base that includes sambar (Rusa unicolor), chital (Axis axis), barasingha/swamp deer (Rucervus duvaucelii), wild boar (Sus scrofa), hog deer (Axis porcinus), barking deer (Muntiacus muntjak), nilgai/blue bull (Boselaphus tragocamelus), chousingha (Tetracerus quadricornis), chinkara (Gazella bennettii), black buck (Antelope cervicapra), gaur (Bos gaurus), wild buffalo (Bubalus bubalis) serow (Naemorhedus sumatraensis), porcupine (Hystrix indica), Hanuman langur (Semnopithecus entellus), rhesus macaque (Macaca mulata), bonnet macaque (Macaca radiata), peafowl (Pavo cristatus) and sometimes even calves of rhinoceros (Rhinoceros unicornis) and elephant (Elephas maximus). They have also been reported to kill other carnivores like sloth bear (Melurus ursinus), crocodile (Crocodylus spp), scaly anteater (Manis crassicaudata) leopard (Panthera pardus) and dholes (Cuon alpinus). Apart from the wild prey, domestic cattle constitute a large part of their diet.

Behaviour

Though the tiger is a solitary, nocturnal predator, however; temporary association between a mating pair and comparatively prolonged association between mother and her offspring are the only social phases of a tiger's life. Their home range consists of the optimal habitat in which it can make a kill, rest and mate. A territory is the area defended by an adult tiger against other tigers. Males have larger home ranges that overlap with home ranges of more than one female. The size of the home range is dynamic, typically depending upon the abundance of prey and overall tiger population in the area. The purpose of defending a territory differs with sex, while female occupy an area big enough to feed herself and her cubs, a male occupies larger area that encompasses the home ranges of many females to increase his reproductive success.

Tigers maintain their territory and avoid intra-specific conflict by means of a range of communication methods which includes vocalization and scent and scratch marks. The different vocalizations by tiger include roars, moans, growls and grunts. The various sounds can be defined as moaning and roaring (roars though rarely heard are used for keeping away other tigers, it along with moaning serves as a communication between prospective mates when a female is receptive), prusten (a friendly sound mostly emitted by a mother approaching her cub), pooking (a sound believed to advertise tiger's presence), grunting (emitted by female to command the cubs to follow her), miaowing (made by cub, apparently indicate stress), woofing (an expression of surprise), growling, snarling and hissing (threatening sounds produced when the animal is annoyed) and coughing roar (indicate anger emitted during attack).

The adult tiger usually avoid each other however when female comes in oestrus the pair associate for two-three days during which they frequently made. There does not seem to be a definitive seasonality in breeding however there is a certain peak in behaviour related to mating from November- April. A male tiger mates with any receptive female it may chance upon whether resident or transient.

After birth the mother nurses the cubs for about two months, subsequently the cubs are fed meat. The cubs gradually start learning hunting skills from their mother and at about 12-18 months become capable of independent hunting. During the entire juvenile period the mother provides protection against other predators both intra and inter-specific. The subadult disperses at an age of about 19-28 months, with males dispersing to wider distances than their female siblings.

Distribution

The subspecies is distributed across India, Nepal, Bhutan and Bangladesh. Distribution across their range has not undergone drastic change, however; the landscapes occupied by them have become increasingly fragmented. They currently range across fragmented landscapes in the Lesser Himalayas and Upper Gangetic Plains (Terai Arc Landscape), Central Indian highlands, Eastern Ghats, Western Ghat, North-eastern hills, Brahmaputra Plains and Sunderbans.

Threats

The tiger population in the Indian subcontinent is threatened by an array of problems ranging from poaching to habitat loss and fragmentation. Earlier slain by hunters for being valuable trophies, the tiger is now poached for its pelt and bones used in traditional oriental medicines. According to the Wildlife Protection Society of India (WPSI) data in 2010 alone 30 tigers were poached for their parts. The tigers are also being persecuted in retaliation to cattle lifting. Apart from direct persecution the tiger are threatened by habitat degradation, fragmentation and prey base depletion.

Threats in captivity

In captivity tigers are threatened by such disease as feline panleucopenia, trypanosomiasis, babesiosis and non specific renal and hepatic disorder. Besides this, efforts to breed white tigers with high exhibit value but low genetic diversity also threaten the ex-situ conservation of tigers.

Status

The efforts for the conservation of tiger in India started with the Project Tiger in 1972. It has since been listed as endangered A2bcd+4bcd; C1+2a (i) under IUCN Red data list, is protected under the Schedule I, Part I of Indian Wildlife Protection Act, 1972 and is placed under Appendix I of CITES. Together these efforts have resulted in an increase in tiger population from an estimated 1411 in 2006 to 1706 as concluded in 2010 tiger census report. The ex-situ population comprises of a total of 381 (155.223.3) individuals of white lineage/ unknown decent in 45 Indian zoos and 78 (44.34.0) individuals of wild/known decent in 30 Indian zoos, as summarized in table 2 and 3, respectively.

Scope of the Studbook

The first recorded entry of Bengal tiger in Indian zoos was in 1951 when a wild caught tigress was brought into captivity in the private collection of the erstwhile rulers of Rewa, a princely state in Madhya Pradesh. The initial phase of the captive tiger population included wild captures and captive births at Rewa and the transfer of these animals to other zoos. The initial phase was followed by breeding in captivity of tigers at various zoos across the country and inclusions of wild rescued animals. The emphasis was on breeding animals for exhibiting. Fallout of this was the breeding of a large number of white tigers a pseudo albinistic condition. This is induced by the presence of recessive alleles in the animals for coat colour. In free ranging condition the survival of white tigers is poor due to the poor camouflage offered by the white coat colour and black stripes resulting in poor hunting condition.

The purpose of a conservation breeding program is to manage captive populations so that they are genetically viable and demographically stable and capable of providing surpluses for restocking/reintroduction if the need arises.

In the present edition of the studbook all animals that have the white gene or are of unknown origin have been excluded from analysis and have been placed separately as annexure III and IV. Detailed demographic and genetic analysis has been carried out for animals whose ancestry is known and are not known to carry the recessive gene for pseudo-albinism. White tigers differ from ordinary orange tigers (if a tiger can be referred to as ordinary) in having ice-blue eyes, a pink nose, and creamy white fur with chocolate stripes. White tigers are not albinos; their color is caused by a double recessive allele. White tigers are the product of a highly inbred stock due to the fact that the recessive alleles required for their expression were found in only a select few of the founding stock.

Methodology

Data for compilation of national studbook was collected from 49 zoos in India that are housing Bengal tiger by means of mailed questionnaire survey, personal visits and CZA website. Collected Data in appropriate format was then entered in SPARKS 1.5 software and studbook report was generated. Subsequently, the SPARKS dataset was imported in Poplink 1.3 and created ~.prn and ~.ped files for demographic and genetic analyses in pm2000. The software pm2000 was used to produce the census report, life tables, population projections, founder statistics, inbreeding coefficients, possible pairings and population planning.

Demographic analyses

Census

The first animal a tigress of wild origin entered the captive population in 1951. In 1959 two tigers of wild origin entered the captive population. The first captive birth of a normal coloured tiger occurred in 1967. By 1986 the captive population had 26 tigers of wild origin and 52 normal coloured captive born tigers. In 2006 the number of tigers of wild origin was 29 and the number of captive born tigers was 49. The current population includes 28 animals of wild origin and 50 born in captivity.

Age Distribution

The age distribution pattern of known age individuals as shown in fig 3 and table 7 in the captive population shows an absence of individuals in the reproductive age classes. Whereas a large number of individuals present in the captive population are in the post reproductive age classes. This is suggestive of a declining population due to the presence of only a few individuals of known origin in the captive Bengal tiger population in Indian zoos. The same is reflected by the absence of individuals in the lower age classes. The few individuals present in the population above 25 years of age are outliers and have no contribution to make to the captive population. Their continued presence is an indicator of the improved health care and husbandry practices in the facilities holding these animals.

Life table

Life table (table 8) analysis of known age individuals was performed using PM2000. The mortality rates in the first year of life are extremely high (males 0.23 and females 0.27). Mortality rates for males thereafter are at a low rate till the 13th year when they rise sharply and then in 19th year of life when they peak again and remain high till the 20th year. However, for females peaks are observed in the 6th, 8th, 13th and 18th years of life. High rates of mortality are observed in females from the 20th to 24th year of life. A few animals of both sexes continue to survive after the last peaks in mortality are observed.

Reproductive activity for males and females start at 3 years of age in the captive population. Fecundity for males peaks in the 10th year of life while for females it is highest in the 6th year of life. For males reproductive activity ceases by the 17th year of life while for females additional peaks are observed in the 10th and 13th years. Reproductive activity is observed to cease by the 15th year of life.

Results of life table analysis suggest that neonatal to juveniles are the most vulnerable age classes for captive tigers. Changing the way pregnant and nursing tigresses are housed and the way they are managed may change the scenario.

Population growth rates

The captive Bengal tiger population of known origin in Indian zoos is declining. The rate of decline is faster for females than males. This decline can be controlled by breeding all available known origin tigers in the reproductive age classes by judicious pairing to ensure genetic viability and demographic stability. The generation length for males is marginally higher at 9.8 years.

Population projections

Projections for the captive Bengal tiger population was made using PM2000. The projections were made for a period of 20 years to achieve a genetically and demographically stable captive population. Table 10 shows the recruitment required in each age class for the next 20 years.

Genetic analyses

Small and fragmented populations are threatened with extinction due to numerous stochastic events. These stochastic events concomitant with reduced mating choices available increases the likelihood of reduced genetic diversity thereby reducing the overall fitness of the population. Captive populations consist of a small sample of the in-situ populations. Accordingly only a small sample of genetic diversity found in free ranging populations is represented in captive populations. This makes captive populations even more vulnerable to stochastic events that threaten their long term survival. This decline in genetic diversity can be significantly arrested by judicious pairing choices and addition of fresh founder animals to the captive population. This can be achieved by carrying out genetic analyses of the captive population. Genetic analysis of the captive Bengal tiger population of known origin was carried out using PM2000. The results of this analysis are presented here.

Table 11 summarizes the genetic status of the captive Bengal tiger population. The captive population had a total of 48 founder animals out of which, only 23 contributed their genes to the captive population. The presence of a large number of founder animals in the captive population has resulted in it retaining a high level of genetic diversity. However, improperly planned mating choices have resulted in relatively high levels of relatedness between individuals as evinced by the values for mean kinship (0.076) and mean inbreeding (0.143). Detailed genetic analysis of the captive population is presented here.

Founder statistics

The captive population had a total of 48 founder animals out of which only 23 were used for breeding purposes. Of these 23 animals stud # 00004, 00007, 00013, 00015, 00049 and 00075 are over represented; 16 other founder animals that contributed to the population are underrepresented while 25 animals are not represented at all. Several animals which are under represented have either reached reproductive senescence or are already dead Stud # 00290, 00298, 00301, 00307, 00308, 00309, 00311, 00316, 00317, 00318, 00321, 00322, 00323, 00324, 00325, 00326 and 00327; a total of additional founders can be used for breeding. Table 12 and figures 7 – 10 summarize the founder statistics of the captive population. The table on founder statistics along with table 15 on individual genetic status of the live individuals in the captive population can be used to determine possible pairing options in order to equalize the founder representation of the population.

Inbreeding statistics

Inbreeding is said to occur when closely related individuals breed to produce progeny. The progeny as a consequence of such breeding inherit lower levels of genetic diversity as a portion of the genes of both parents are shared. Individuals with inbreeding are less fit and have lower reproductive potential than animals with no inbreeding. The inbreeding details of the captive known origin population of Bengal tigers in Indian zoos is summarized in table 16. The captive population has a large number of inbred individuals in both the living and the dead individuals. There are 179 individuals overall with no inbreeding. However, a large proportion of them are dead. Inbreeding coefficients of 0.125 was present in 21 animals, 0.1875 in 15 animals, 0.2188 in 1 animal, 0.25 in 68 animals, 0.2813 for 5 animals, 0.2969 for 4 animals, 0.3125 for 3 animals and 0.375 for 5 animals. The high values of inbreeding coefficients and mean inbreeding coefficients are suggestive of the continued loss of genetic diversity of the population. This in turn impacts the overall fitness of the species due to increased disease susceptibility and lower reproductive rates.

Population Planning and Recommendations

In-situ Bengal tiger population continues to remain threatened despite an increase from 1411 in 2006 to 1706 in 2010. Primary causes for this low population level is poaching, habitat loss and fragmentation. The species receives a high level of protection in 39 tiger reserves in India and a few others in Nepal, Bhutan and Bangladesh. However, in most of the protected areas the population levels are extremely low and continue to remain vulnerable. The low population size has resulted in loss of genetic diversity thereby reducing the overall fitness of the population.

The above factors make the judicious management of the captive population imperative to ensure the long term survival of a genetically viable and demographically stable population. The current captive population of Bengal tiger of known origin comprises of 78 (44.34) specimens. The total number of specimens across time was 328. The captive population had 48 individuals of wild origin of which 23 had contributed to the population. The population has a small percentage of the founder genome surviving (15.56) as compared to the potential founder genomes surviving (41.01). The captive population requires intensive management efforts to ensure the long term survival of a genetically viable and demographically stable population for insurance purpose.

Management goals

The known origin captive population of Bengal tiger was modeled using the goals scenario of PM2000. This suggests the increase of the current population of 78 specimens to 179 specimens over the next 8 years, would ensure meeting the requirements of a demographically stable population. The management strategy table 15 suggests that with a generation length of 9.6 years and a population growth rate of 1.1 would ensure meeting the objectives of a self sustaining captive population. The use of pairing recommendations as provided in table 16 would ensure the maintenance of genetic viability without addition of new founder animals.

Pairings were carried out using the pairings scenario of PM2000. This scenario generates an ordered list of animals of both sexes. The list can be ordered according to the different columns present. We had ordered the animals according to mean kinships. Animals with mean kinship values below 0.01 and a maximum age of 17 years (based on life table analysis) were used for pairings.

Pairings which produced offspring with no inbreeding coefficient and minimal kinship values were used. The remaining mating choices were rejected. The possible pairing for each female that can be used for breeding is summarized in table 17.

Conclusion

Royal Bengal Tiger are large solitary felids and a flagship species. A total of 39 tiger reserves (32137.14 sq km of core tiger habitat) are home to the species. The dwindling population of tigers in India despite showing an upward trend as reflected in the 2010 tiger population estimates (1706), continues to remain threatened by large scale poaching and habitat fragmentation. The maintenance of a genetically viable and demographically stable captive population for insurance purposes remains extremely important. The present population of Bengal tigers in Indian zoos comprises of a large number of individuals of unknown ancestry and white tiger lineages. These have been excluded out of the analytical studbook and are placed as annexure III and IV.

The current captive population of Bengal tiger of known origin comprises of 78 (44.34) specimens. The total number of specimens across time was 328. The captive population had 48 individuals of wild origin of which 23 had contributed to the population. The population has a small percentage of the founder genome surviving (15.56) as compared to the potential founder genomes surviving (41.01). The captive population requires intensive management efforts to ensure the long term survival of a genetically viable and demographically stable population for insurance purpose. It is suggested that an increase of the current population of 78 specimens to 179 specimens over the next 8 years, with a population growth rate of 1.1 would ensure meeting the requirements of a demographically stable population. The captive population has adequate number of living founders accordingly no new founder animals are required for achieving the desired objective of retaining 90% genetic diversity over 50 years. The same can be achieved by judicious pairing choices while breeding the captive population

Glossary of Terms

Demographic Terms

Age Distribution -- A two-way classification showing the numbers or percentages of individuals in various age and sex classes.

Population Growth Rate (Lambda, λ) -- The proportional change in population size from one year to the next. Lambda can be based on life-table calculations (the expected lambda) or from observed changes in population size from year to year. A lambda of 1.11 means a 11% per year increase; lambda of .97 means a 3% decline in size per year.

Px, Age-Specific Survival -- The probability that an individual of age x survives one time period; is conditional on an individual being alive at the beginning of the time period. Alternatively, the proportion of individuals which survive from the beginning of one age class to the next.

Qx, Mortality -- Probability that an individual of age x dies during time period. $Qx = 1 - Px$. The proportion of individuals that die during an age class. It is calculated from the number of animals that die during an age class divided by the number of animals that were alive at the beginning of the age class (i.e.-at risk).

lx, Age-Specific Survivorship -- The probability that a new individual (e.g., age 0) is alive at the beginning of age x . Alternatively, the proportion of individuals which survive from birth to the beginning of a specific age class.

Mx, Fecundity -- The average number of same-sexed young born to animals in that age class. Because SPARKS is typically using relatively small sample sizes, SPARKS calculates Mx as 1/2 the average number of young born to animals in that age class. This provides a somewhat less noisy estimate of Mx, though it does not allow for unusual sex ratios. The fecundity rates provide information on the age of first, last, and maximum reproduction.

Vx, Reproductive Value -- The expected number of offspring produced this year and in future years by an animal of age x .

Ex, Life Expectancy -- Average years of further life for an animal in age class x .

Risk (Qx or Mx) -- The number of individuals that have lived during an age class. The number at risk is used to calculate Mx and Qx by dividing the number of births and deaths that occurred during an age class by the number of animals at risk of dying and reproducing during that age class.

Genetic Terms

(Founder) Contribution -- Number of copies of a founder's genome that are present in the living descendants. Each offspring contributes 0.5, each grand-offspring contributes 0.25, etc.

Current Gene Diversity (GD) -- The proportional gene diversity (as a proportion of the source population) is the probability that two alleles from the same locus sampled at random from the population will be identical by descent. Gene diversity is calculated from allele frequencies, and is the heterozygosity expected in progeny produced by random mating, and if the population were in Hardy-Weinberg equilibrium.

Effective Population Size (Inbreeding Ne) -- The size of a randomly mating population of constant size with equal sex ratio and a Poisson distribution of family sizes that would (a) result in the same mean rate of inbreeding as that observed in the population, or (b) would result in the same rate of random change in gene frequencies (genetic drift) as observed in the population. These two definitions are identical only if the population is demographically stable (because the rate of inbreeding depends on the distribution of alleles in the parental generation, whereas the rate of gene frequency drift is measured in the current generation).

FOKE, First Order Kin Equivalents -- The number of first-order kin (siblings or offspring) that would contain the number of copies of an individual's alleles (identical by descent) as are present in the captive-born population. Thus an offspring or sib contributes 1 to FOKE; each grand-offspring contributes 1/2 to FOKE; each cousin contributes 1/4 to FOKE. $FOKE = 4 * N * MK$, in which N is the number of living animals in the captive population.

Founder -- An individual obtained from a source population (often the wild) that has no known relationship to any individuals in the derived population (except for its own descendants).

Founder Genome Equivalents (FGE) -- The number wild-caught individuals (founders) that would produce the same amount of gene diversity as does the population under study. The gene diversity of a population is $1 - 1 / (2 * FGE)$.

Founder Genome Surviving -- The sum of allelic retentions of the individual founders (i.e., the product of the mean allelic retention and the number of founders).

GU, Genome Uniqueness -- Probability that an allele sampled at random from an individual is not present, identical by descent, in any other living individual in the population. GU-all is the genome uniqueness relative to the entire population. GU-Desc is the genome uniqueness relative to the living non-founder, descendants.

Inbreeding Coefficient (F) -- Probability that the two alleles at a genetic locus are identical by descent from an ancestor common to both parents. The mean inbreeding coefficient of a population will be the proportional decrease in observed heterozygosity relative to the expected heterozygosity of the founder population.

KV, Kinship Value -- The weighted mean kinship of an animal, with the weights being the reproductive values of each of the kin. The mean kinship value of a population predicts the loss of gene diversity expected in the subsequent generation if all animals were to mate randomly and all were to produce the numbers of offspring expected for animals of their age.⁴⁵

Mean Generation Time (T) -- The average time elapsing from reproduction in one generation to the time the next generation reproduces. Also, the average age at which a female (or male) produces offspring. It is not the age of first reproduction. Males and females often have different generation times.

Mean Kinship (MK) -- The mean kinship coefficient between an animal and all animals (including itself) in the living, captive-born population. The mean kinship of a population is equal to the proportional loss of gene diversity of the descendant (captive-born) population relative to the founders and is also the mean inbreeding coefficient of progeny produced by random mating. Mean kinship is also the reciprocal of two times the founder genome equivalents: $MK = 1 / (2 * FGE)$. $MK = 1 - GD$.

Percent Known -- Percent of an animal's genome that is traceable to known Founders. Thus, if an animal has an UNK sire, the % Known = 50. If it has an UNK grandparent, % Known = 75.

Prob Lost -- Probability that a random allele from the individual will be lost from the population in the next generation, because neither this individual nor any of its relatives pass on the allele to an offspring. Assumes that each individual will produce a number of future offspring equal to its reproductive value, V_x .

(Founder) Representation – Proportion of the genes in the descendant population that derives from that founder. I.e., proportional Founder Contribution.

Allele Retention – The probability that a gene present in a founder individual exists in the living, descendant population.
